

In 2005 the government of Abu Dhabi in the UAE decided to undertake one of the most ambitious projects of the 21st century. To build an entire city that emits absolutely no emissions and produces no waste— the Masdar City. Given all the concerns surrounding the environment, and

ENERGY

Masdar's energy comes entirely from renewable sources. There are solar panels on top of every building providing about thirty percent of each building's energy