He emphasized that he was not advocating wage and price controls as the 1975-78 program had shown these to be "ineffective and inequitable." This was part of a six point, "made in Canada" interest rate policy outlined by Lougheed which also recommended a return to emphasis on the private sector, restoration of investor confidence through re-introduction of tax expenditures eliminated in the federal budget and relaxation of foreign investment fodoral Finance -1---3 to the sublic

Premiers' Conference

By August, when the annual Premiers' Conference was held in Halifax, wage restraint programs were in place in several jurisdictions as attempts to tackle inflation. However, the provinces argued that a more comprehensive solution, preferably an intergovernmental one, was required to pull Canada out of its recession and achieve economic recovery.

The need to stimulate investment was central to the provinces' discussions. Alberta attributed much of the blame for declining investment to "deteriorating confidence that Canada will correct its economic

Québec

Québec's attempt early in the year to negotiate a short term economic scheme in conjunction with Ottawa was unsuccessful. At the first ministers' conference in February, Premier Lévesque and his economic ministers presented a plan for a $200 million emergency fund which would
